“ I regret being a bit late in learning about Keem's passing. Nevertheless, I do not hesitate to say that Keem was one of the nicest young men that I've ever known. I watched this brother grow up around his Grandfather's and Dad's body and fender shop: a place that his family allowed a number of us kids to have as a safe place to hang out and learn a viable skill and trade. Keem loved good conversations, too. I've enjoyed many talks with him. I will miss him. May his soul rest in eternal peace and God's promise.
