“Momma, never in a million years would I have thought I would be sitting in this seat. Even though I know we all have to sit here one day, I’m okay. Your baby girl is okay. I held you tightly and kissed your cheeks. I rocked you slowly. I felt your last heartbeat, my baby. You were tired; nobody knows the feelings you were feeling. I remember the last hospital stay lasted a month, and this time, you didn’t put up a fight. I would leave work and come to you. If I was off, I would drop off your babies and come to you. I remember everything we talked about. I remember you coming home and helping Lamar and me put you in your chair. He gave you a pedicure, and I did your hair. Your smile said it all; you were trying so hard, Momma. But now I know the Lord was preparing you for your new body. On Monday, you got up and walked on home to a place we all wish to be one day. So, I will ask you this: Mom, please continue to walk with me and give me strength. I hope I made you proud, Momma. I love you so much.”
